

Problem Statement:

Most of the time University of South Carolina students have to wait to sit in the dining hall or have complaints about the food.

Details:

Russel House is one of the main dining halls on campus at University of South Carolina. This dining hall is packed with different fast food restaurants, etc. The dining hall itself is decent. The pizza is good, however it always looks different. And some of the other food that I would usually love to eat just isn't as appetizing. Not to mention it gets packed to the point where there is nowhere to sit. Despite all this, Russel isn't all that bad; these are just some things that I think could be improved.
